How To Get Into Undergraduate Courses at the Haas School of Business

Enrollment demands make it impossible to accommodate everyone who wants to take Undergraduate Business courses. If you are wait-listed for a Business class, you should also attend a back-up course.

On a space available basis, the Haas Undergraduate Program Office enrolls Haas majors first in Business courses, regardless of wait list position, followed by non-Haas students starting from the beginning of the wait list. Priority for enrollment in undergraduate Business courses is as follows:

* Undergraduate Haas Majors
* All other eligible undergraduates on the wait lists
* Graduate students
* Eligible Concurrent Enrollment and cross registration students

The Haas Undergraduate Program Office recommends that non-Haas students wait list themselves during Phase I. When the Adjustment Period starts each semester, non-majors will be moved off the wait lists on a space available basis.

Students not meeting listed prerequisites for Business courses or not attending in the first two weeks of instruction may not be advanced from the wait lists or may be instructor dropped.

Note re: UGBA 101B—Macroeconomics (Wilcox):

Pre-requisites for this course are not enforced. Students without the pre-requisites won’t be denied wait-listing; nor will they be denied enrollment. Pre-requisites are recommended and students without the pre-requisites take the course at their own risk.

The Undergraduate Program finalizes enrollment right after the end of the second week of classes and over-enrolls courses to allow for attrition. Check your enrollment in business classes on Bear Facts on Tuesday of the third week. If you have not been enrolled in a course by that time, you should NOT continue to attend as you will not be added to the class.

Professors and GSIs CANNOT enroll students in Haas courses.

Auditing of Undergraduate Business courses is not permitted.
